ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Sisters, Nalani and Leila Butler are top performing high school students in Fairfax County, VA. Always up for a challenge and willing to try new things, they have acted in plays, danced in recitals, soared in gymnastics, nailed complicated jumps and spins in ice skating, rallied school spirit as cheerleaders, and showcased their athleticism as lacrosse players. As leaders, they have headed multiple honors societies, captained various school groups and teams, organized events, participated in focus groups, and served their peers as representatives in student government and their community through volunteerism.

Keeping with their resolve to try new things, Nalani and Leila collaborated during a summer break from school to develop the characters and story for a children's book series which tackles themes of self-esteem, bullying, individuality, diversity, creativity, and friendship. The first book in the series entitled, Paige Saves the Day has been released by BookButler Publishing Company.
